Market Conditions

- While small cap stocks are still up year to date, they continue to be choppy as they retreated in the second quarter after a strong first quarter, and continued to widen their relative gap with large cap stocks.
- Security selection remained key as individual stocks have become less correlated as the year has progressed.
- Among small cap stocks, quality continued to outperform YTD with highest ROE names noticeably outperforming lowest ROE names. Top sales growth companies also strongly outperformed lower revenue growers.
- An environment that favors higher growth and quality with falling correlations tends to be favorable for our Fund on a relative basis, and that was the case this quarter.

Portfolio Review

- The Small Cap Growth Fund outperformed its benchmark, the Russell 2000 Growth index, primarily due to security selection within the information technology, financials and consumer discretionary sectors.

Contributors

- On an individual stock level, Insmed, Boot Barn and Onto Innovation were the top contributors to performance.
- Insmed is a pharmaceutical company focused on respiratory diseases. The stock outperformed as a result of the company reporting positive Phase 3 results for its lead pipeline asset, brensocatic. We believe the data support the drug’s potential to be a multi-billion dollar blockbuster.
- Boot Barn is a leading retailer in the work and western category with the potential to double its footprint. Its quarter to date comparable sales inflected positive after going through two years of digesting the boost from government stimulus dollars.
- Onto Innovation continued to benefit from capital equipment orders related to Advanced Packaging and High Bandwidth Memory for AI chips. The company continues to raise guidance and beat estimates

Detractors

- Evolent Health, SiteOne Landscape Supply and Kinsale Group were the largest individual detractors from performance.
- Evolent Health is a healthcare technology and services company that helps insurance companies and providers participate in value based care programs. While the company has continued to execute very well, there has been meaningful speculation that increased healthcare utilization will negatively impact their business, weighing on the stock’s performance.
- SiteOne Landscape is a distributor of landscaping products across the country. Management has been able to grow organically and through acquisitions by rolling up a very fragmented industry, driving double digit revenue growth. As the supply chain tightness abated and commodity prices fell, it created a deflationary pricing scenario for the company, which had a negative impact on revenue and margins. We suspect this trend is close to an end and we believe this well-run company will get back to putting up solid revenue numbers with expanding margins.
- Kinsale Capital Group is a property and casualty (P&C) insurer that operates exclusively in the favorable excess and surplus (E&S) risk protection markets. The company has benefited from strong premium trends and profitability over the past few years. Kinsale underperformed during the quarter due to a lowering of premium growth expectations.

Outlook

- As evidenced by the recent strength in the larger cap benchmarks, the market is discounting positive outcomes in the economy (soft landing) and the beginning of monetary easing by the Federal Reserve later this year. New highs in the S&P 500 (at the time of this writing) are also being driven by a small group of companies that sit squarely in the current theme of artificial intelligence (AI).
- While we have always tried to stay away from second guessing the broad market and timing macro-led inflection points, we seem to have arrived at a place where small caps could not be less in the spotlight relative to their large cap cousins.

- As a result, when we look out over a reasonable horizon, our belief is that we are inching closer to the next small cap cycle. Will we need to endure more pain before we reach some kind of small vs large inflection point? Perhaps. Yet, as we analyze the data presented in the letter, we truly believe that exposure to our asset class will be rewarded in the coming years.
- With correlations falling and dollars being reallocated down the market cap spectrum as portfolios/plans creep further off-sides on large cap exposures, disciplined investment processes like ours should see a tailwind to their absolute and relative returns. Risk management will, as usual, remain critical, and this is woven into our DNA. We look forward to updating you on our progress.

About Risk

Equity securities are volatile and can decline significantly in response to broad market and economic conditions. Smaller company investments can be more volatile than those of larger companies. Growth stocks may be more sensitive to market conditions than other equities, as their prices strongly reflect future expectations. Foreign and emerging market securities may be subject to greater political, economic, environmental, credit, currency and information risks. Foreign securities may be subject to higher volatility than US securities due to varying degrees of regulation and limited liquidity. These risks are magnified in emerging markets.
