

Jingzhou Meng

Jingzhou Meng is a sovereign analyst in the macro strategies group at Loomis, Sayles & Company. She works with senior analysts to cover Latin America, frontier countries and developed European countries to conduct fundamental economic analysis and market pricing. Jingzhou joined Loomis Sayles in 2019 from the International Monetary Fund, where she was a research analyst, covering emerging markets in Europe and Asia Pacific, and prepared regular surveillance reports and assisting with cross-country research projects. Prior to this, she was an economic system specialist at Experis, where she provided economic data management application support and trainings to International Monetary Fund data users. Jingzhou earned a BA from Tianjin Foreign Studies University and an MA from George Washington University.